The Didsbury Hockey team went to Lacombe last Thursday to play a league game with that town. The Didsbury team lost out by a score of 8-4. Some dissatisfaction was felt with the referee in the last half of the game. The score stood 4-0 in favor of Didsbury at half-time and the Lacombe team scored 8 goals in the last twenty minutes of the game. The reason is stated that the referee illegally penalized Didsbury players giving the Lacombe players the benefit. However, the Didsbury boys are more than well pleased at the reception they got from the Lacombe team, and say they are a clean, gentlemanly bunch of players.

Didsbury One

The hockey game between Didsbury and Lacombe on Wednesday was one of the most exciting ever played on local ice. At time neither team had scored although the game in the last half was especially fast. The referee decided that the game would have to be played till one side scored, according to the rules, and so another ten minutes were added in which Capt. Curtis scored one for Didsbury. G. M. Gaudes refereed the game and gave entire satisfaction holding the players down on offside especially.

5 DOCTORS GAVE HER UP!

Ulcers and Sores Defied all Treatment
Zan-Buk has Worked Complete Cure

Miraculous indeed is the cure which Zan-Buk has worked in the case of Mrs. Jane Bruce of Original (Ont.). "I began to suffer," she says, "from ulcers and skin sores. These broke out on my legs and different parts of my body, and spread to an alarming extent, causing me great pain. They defied all remedies I applied, and I lost sleep and rest, and remained suppurating open wounds. One medical man after another gave my case up, until I had consulted five different doctors, and they were all baffled by my case. Then I went into hospital and was there five months, and came away very little better. The sores were so extensive and I was so weakened that I had to walk with a stick and a crutch. This was my condition when first I began to use Zan-Buk. I applied it to the sores and in a few days I thought I saw an improvement. I persevered with the balm, and to cut a long story short, the wonderful balm did what all the doctors had failed to do—healed my ulcers. I have now put away my stick and crutch, the ulcers and sores are healed, and I take this opportunity of strongly advising all who suffer from sores, ulcers or open wounds to give Zan-Buk a proper trial."

It is by effecting such impressive cures as this that Zan-Buk has established its worldwide reputation in every country to which it has been introduced. It has become the leading family balm and is one of the most valuable of all medicinal preparations. This surely is proof of exceptional merit! Purely local in nature it supplies the housewife with a handy and effective cure for the hundred and one injuries to which she or the children or the husband are liable. Zan-Buk is also a sure cure for eczema, ringworm, impetigo, corns, chapped hands, sores due to blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or post free from Zan-Buk Co., Toronto. Beware of cheap and harmful imitations sometimes offered as "just as good."

Her Laugh.

A story is told of a woman living in a lonely part of the Far West, whose husband had one day been away from home much longer than usual. She waited anxiously for his return, when to her surprise and alarm a band of ruffians rode up and dismounted a little distance from the hut. Approaching her, the leader of the party exclaimed, apologetically: "We've come to see you, ma'am, that we've lynched your husband. We admit we've hung the wrong man, so you've got to laugh on us there."—Tit-Bits.

It is a Liver Pill—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parment's Vegetable Pills. Their operation, though gentle, is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Parment's pills poison every living thing—plants as well as animals.

Repeat it—"Shiloh's Cure will always cure my coughs and colds."

Stage Manager—I wish we could work in a few more realistic touches in this woodland scene. Now, how would it be to have someone grow like a bear?

Author—The very thing! We'll call in the critics.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in cows. Arthur, the six-year-old son of President Hadley, was recently discovered in full possession of the bathtub, engaged in a most interesting and noisy occupation. He had been removed only by force, he left the bath and, meeting a lady acquaintance, volunteered the best of information.

"The President of Yale College won't take his bath this morning." "Why not?" asked the lady. "Because," answered Arthur, "I've got the plug to the bathtub in my pocket."—Success Magazine.

FOOTBALL WAR CRIES.

Britain Is Now Hearing Fierce Yells From the Colonies.

Once again a strange war-cry is being chanted in England. It is that of the "Wallys and the Bu-rangs." Sample this. "Win nang a lan. Win nang a lan. Win nang a lan-naur. I am a wally. Bu rang a lan Bu rang a lan. Bu rang a lan—yang!" Fearful as it looks, it sounds a good deal like the yells of the Maori, who accompany its delivery in a terrifying; but the meaning is all right. The whole slogan, which is in the weird language used by the aborigines of Australia, may be translated: "We are pleased to meet you. May the best man win; but we'll beat you if we can."

The Maori cries are even more appalling than those raised by Canadian spectators; for, though the men of the Dominion merely spit the heavens, they vary their din by chanting their admiration of a favorite player, as: "Jones! Jones! Take—Jones!" One of the first colonial teams to use a native war-cry in England was that composed of Maoris, which some years back toured with much success in Great Britain. Before each match they massed, and exclaimed in ringing tones: "Ako! Ako! Kia! Kaka!" This was said to mean, "Be strong!" The "All Blacks" also brought a war cry, which astonished spectators as much as their brilliant play. Here is the English version:

Leader: It is death! It is death! Chorus: It is life! It is life! This is the strong one, the man of the brawny tribe, who has come to us to cause the sun to shine. Hurrah! Hurrah! He has caused the sun to shine!

The Maori chant was a prelude to every match, and was never omitted. When the New Zealanders played Blackheath, the referee blew his whistle for the "Ako! Ako! Kia! Kaka!" greeting their opponents; but the strange cry went on to the end without a break. In the New Zealanders' game, too, some unmanly spectators burst into the local slogan before the Maori chant was finished. Again, however, the visitors were untroubled.

By far the most thrilling of British football slogans are those of the Welsh, who occasionally sing patriotic songs before beginning a match. The most remarkable instance was at Cardiff, when Wales defeated the "All Blacks," who had till then carried everything before them. After the New Zealanders had chanted their war-cry, the Welsh took to the song of "our Fathers," and the vast assembly of forty thousand took up the strain: "The land of my fathers! The land of the free!"

The song of the union, and the volume of sound electrified the New Zealanders.

A Life For A Life.

Miss Young, of the South Sea Island Evangelical Mission, who has recently returned to Britain after four months among these truculent islanders, has many interesting things to relate to her countrymen. Native murders, it appears, are of frequent occurrence, but a great many are the result of feuds between different tribes. Two Christian boys belonging to the mission at Malo were brutally done to death, and another Christian named at Fin was also murdered. The crimes were unprovoked, but were committed because the islanders believed in having a life for a life. If a man belonging to a tribe is killed by a member of another tribe, he does not until the death is avenged, and it generally happens that the most influential man in the offending tribe falls a victim. The native who was killed at Fin left the mission station, accompanied by a native guide, and the bushmen came down, charged with him, and they ate food together. Then the bushmen suddenly turned on him and killed him, to avenge a murder committed by his tribe some time previously. On another occasion, at Onepia, the head station of the mission, a native came and associated with the Christian boys, and shortly before daylight one morning this man secured an axe, struck a Christian boy on the head, and ran away. The injured boy was attended by a lady missionary, and subsequently recovered.

AT THE BOX OFFICE.

Youngster Easily Explained the Location of Best He Wanted to Occupy. There was an expectation long of prospective theater goers at the box office window, and the treasurer despite his usual genial disposition was becoming a bit grouchy. His replies were short and terse. This was not lost on a youngster who stood awaiting his turn.

"What is it, boy?" the ticket dispenser asked sharply.

"Gimme a good seat?" the youngster asked.

"Is what location? Talk fast."

"I want the dog seat," the kid answered.

"Look here; I haven't time to fool. Where do you want to sit?"

"I told you in the dog seat, I told you in the dog seat, I told you in the dog seat. Ain't that plain enough?"

"Well, where is the dog seat, then?"

"Gee, chapple, get wise—K—R—"

Then the treasurer smiled—Lip-cinco's Magazine.

"After taking three bottles of your wonderful medicine, our baby was suddenly well and needed no more medicine. At sixteen months of age she weighed thirty pounds. She had cried eight months, night and day, and nothing did her good until we tried Scott's Emulsion."—MRS. E. C. SMITH, Villa Rica, Ga.

Scott's Emulsion

probably saved this child's life. Four doctors had been tried. Scott's Emulsion seemed to be just the thing needed, and it is just the thing needed by thousands of other children. It's so easily digested, so pure and harmless, yet most powerful in building up the most delicate child or adult. But be sure to get Scott's Emulsion, there are so many worthless and harmful imitations.

Huntly's Horse.

P. Huntly, the popular London, England, comedian, whose quaint utterances are quoted more than those of any other actor, is a passionately fond of horses, and it is his ambition, we believe, to devote his attention entirely to horse-breeding. Until then he has contented himself with trying his luck on the turf, and he has not been altogether successful. A dear little pony, which he has named "Huntly's horse," is his companion and his hobby. The young lady must have had an extremely limited knowledge as to the proper equine equipment of a gentleman who "traces," when she, with a bright smile, "Oh, yes; I believe he has a horse. It is preferable to reflect on the equitide with which Mr. Huntly must follow the doings of this solitary animal."

Reward of Gallantry.

Charles Chatwin, a Coventry, Eng., and boy, who saved the lives of three children from the canal at different times, was rewarded from the deputy-mayor of Coventry, and the Birmingham and Society's bronze medal in recognition of his bravery.

Some of my friends, I regret to say, did not do so, and I was quite cool to them at the luncheon the other day."—The Boston Record.

PRINCE OF IMPOSTERS.

Counterpart of Doyle's "Twisted Lip" Is Caught Begging in London.

Cecil Broun de Smith, the most famous of begging impostors, and the living counterpart of Sir Conan Doyle's "Man With the Twisted Lip," appeared in public once more at the Western Police Court a short time after a period of retirement. He is the "paralytic" beggar who was once so familiar and pathetic a sight in the city.

For months he dragged himself painfully through the streets with a tangle of matches, from the sale of which he was supposed to eke out a miserable existence. His head hung on one side, his face was distorted, and his right arm dangled limp and useless. One night, after business hours, a city detective was amazed to see him mounting the steps of the Crystal Palace. He was followed to the entrance, where he was watched, and it was found that he lived in a substantial villa at Northwood, and that he had a car and similar luxuries. A term of imprisonment followed.

On the occasion he was described as a vocalist of Wroughton road, Clapham Junction, and was brought up after a warrant for the non-payment of £25 due to his wife under an alimony order.

Some later incidents in his career were narrated. It was stated that he had been preaching religion at Clapham common, and had cheated people right and left by posing as a philanthropist. Numerous complaints had been received about him.

The magistrate made an order for the immediate payment of the money, or three months' imprisonment in default.

Thirteen Days on Three Biscuits.

Two Indians who were lost from the schooner "The Canadian" in F. Bay, and brought here by the schooner Markland a few days ago were afflicted with the "twisted lip" for thirteen days with only three sea biscuits and no water for ten days.

The Indians also suffered from a lack of biscuit a day and subsisted on this for nine days. The rain came and water was caught in a sea bucket on the tenth day, when hope was almost gone, they killed a seal and cooked the fat of the blubber of the seal.

On the fourteen day they landed at Bristol Bay, Unimak Island, and were subsequently rescued.

First Lady Member.

The first woman to attain membership in the Canadian Mining Institute was elected a few days ago in the person of Mrs. Rosaline Young, of the Province of Ontario, Secretary of British Columbia.

Mrs. Young was the recipient of congratulations from several of the officials of the institute and others on the distinction of being the first lady to be elected a member of the institute. It is noteworthy that when, several years ago, Miss Watson (now Mrs. Young) was elected an associate member of one of the British mining institutes, she was also the first lady member of that institution.

ILLS OF CHILDHOOD, HOW TO CURE THEM

In thousands of homes Baby's Own Tablets is the only medicine used when children are ailing, and the mother who keeps this medicine on hand may feel as safe as though there was a doctor consulting in the home. Baby's Own Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, expel worms, and make teething easy. The mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine contains no opiate or poisonous ingredients. Mrs. H. H. Bonnyman, Matuli, N. S. S., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little girl while teething and for constipation, and think there is no medicine can equal them. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Leokville, Ont."

"What do you think of Roosevelt's plan for occupying the farmers?" asked the casual visitor.

My neighbor, Bill Hawkins, was uplitted once in 50 last spring and it like to have killed him."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Frank Statement

Peruna is the Best Medicine in the World.

I RECOMMEND PERUNA.

MR. EMILE MAROIS, 1820 Ontario street, Montreal, Canada, writes: "After taking nine bottles of Peruna I find that I am cured. I still take it occasionally. For me it is the best medicine in the world. I have recommended it to a number of persons." Mr. J. C. Hervey Pelletier, Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ontario, writes: "The Peruna is particularly efficacious in the cure of catarrhal affections of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Six bottles cured me this winter of bronchitis. I am completely restored, and I owe thanks to the Peruna. I have recommended this remedy to a large number of my friends afflicted with the same trouble, and they have verified my good opinion of this valuable remedy."

Both Away from Temptation. A story is told of a west country bishop who rebuked the sporting parson for his hunting frolics. I hear you go for hunting a good deal," he observed one day. "You ought not to do that, there is plenty of work to be accomplished in the parish."

"But," protested the vicar, "fox hunting is most healthy exercise; besides I hear you were at a ball the other night."

"In a sense that is so," replied the bishop, "but truly speaking, I was three or four rooms away from the ball room."

The vicar smiled and then retorted: "I am always three or four fields behind the horse, so what's the difference?"—Tit-Bits.

A Cure for Fever and Ague.—Disturbance of the stomach and liver always precede attacks of fever and ague, showing derangement of the digestive organs and deterioration in the quality of the blood. In these ailments Parment's Vegetable Pills have been found most effective, abating the fever and subduing the ague in a few days. There are many who are subject to these distressing disturbances and to these there is no better preparation procurable as a means of relief.

Council Meeting

The Council met on Monday night with the following members present:
Mayor Corbitt, Councillors Hembling, Hunsperger, Good, Osmond, Moyer,
Liesemer, Clerk Eby and Solicitor
MacLeod.

The first item of business was a report from the Civic Work Committee.

They recommend erecting a small building for housing fire engines and lock up, the cost not to exceed the sum of $425. The size to be about 16 x 26, 12 ft sides, 12 ft. front, shiplap sides and roof. The report stated that the committee had interviewed the owner of the present building and he had asked $500 for same, also another building formerly occupied as a real estate office for which $275 was asked, but the committee thought that by the time the buildings were moved and fixed up they would not pay for the money expended.

Another item was that the committee thought that it is necessary to take steps to drain the town and asked the Council to take up the matter.

The committee also recommended the opening of the blind line from town line half mile west to Sanderman's corners.

On motion the first clause relating to erection of fire hall was adopted and the remainder of the report laid over for further consideration.

The Finance Committee report was then read as follows:

We your committee beg to report on the financial condition of the town as follows:—

Having gone into the matter
according to the Secretary's report we find that at the end of the year 1928 the total indebtedness of the town was $4230.29 with a possible collectable asset of $1940.00 in the uncollected taxes, leaving a balance of debt, if these are collected in full, of $2290.29.

The absolute necessary expenditure for the current year according to our figures is $5743.00.

Therefore in order to wipe off the present indebtedness we your committee recommend that a by law to issue debentures to the extent of $4000 be placed before the ratepayers.

On motion the report was laid over for further consideration as the Board of Health were present and wished to make a report.

Dr. Reid, chairman of the Board of Health, was present and stated that the Board had decided to request the council to put in as complete a system of drainage as possible for the sloughs and also other drains. In answer to several questions put, Dr. Reid stated that the drainage was an absolute necessity. There was at least $1000 spent by the people in typhoid fever cases last year and if the town was not careful there would be a good deal more than that spent if a system of drainage was not installed.

The report was considered by the Council and as the estimates for draining the town had been submitted by the surveyors when making a survey of the town, the cost being $3,800, the matter was taken up with the report of the Finance Committee.

The Council felt that considering the financial condition of affairs that nothing could be done unless debentures were sold for drainage purposes, and also thought at the same time a debenture should be sold to clear off the present encumbrances, such as park debt, fire apparatus and other indebtedness.

It was decided that as matters now stand if these debentures are not issued, no improvements whatever can be done in the town as the receipts from taxes will not cover incurred liabilities for the year, whereas if the debentures were issued, the drainage question and the small debts on the town can be cleared off, and there is a chance of lowering the tax rate and giving the Council a few hundred dollars to work on.

On motion the Solicitor was instructed to draw up by-laws for the purpose of selling debentures for $4000 for drainage purposes and $4000 to clear off all indebtedness.

At the Railway Commission sits in Calgary on the 17th and 18th of this month, the solicitor was instructed to attend and take whatever steps are necessary in the Hespeler street railway crossing matter.

The nuisance ground question was taken up as no papers relating to the matter can be found for leasing or hiring said grounds or the amount of land involved.

Dr. Liesemer was present and stated that there was an agreement drawn up years ago, but where it was now he could not say.

The Solicitor will take up the matter.

Better provision for means of fire escape from the Opera House was taken up and discussed at some length.

Councillor Hembling, part owner of the building, stated that he had gone into the matter as thoroughly as he possibly could and told what plans he had tried to figure out for the further safety of the patrons of the house, and also stated that he would like to hear suggestions from the Council. He also said that while he was running the hall, he always had fire extinguishers close at hand and he would see that this was continued.

It being 11 o'clock the Council stood adjourned but the matter was thoroughly discussed by the Council who felt that Mr. Hembling had done his best for the public, but some other means of egress from the building in case of fire will be provided as soon as possible.

Any good druggist can dispense this, or, even better, a person can buy the items separately and mix them at home by shaking them well together in a bottle. It is stated that the ingredients being vegetable gentle and natural action, and graduleaving the kidneys in a perfectly healthy condition.

Implicit Obedience

Freddy acquired the habit of protesting, or making excuses, whenever his mother asked him to do anything. And so it happened that, upon one occasion, when Freddy had a real explanation to offer, he had great difficulty in making himself heard.

That afternoon it looked very much as though rain were about to come; therefore Freddy's mother called to him.

"Freddy, please close the trapdoor leading to the roof," began Freddy.

"But, mother," began Freddy.

"Now, you heard what I told you; go up and close the trapdoor," firmly replied his mother.

"Yes, mother, but—"

"Freddy, I tell you for the last time to close that trapdoor."

Freddy slowly turned, climbed to the roof and closed the door, while the storm raged; the rain fell in torrents.

An hour or so later, when the family gathered for tea, Freddy's mother asked where his father was.

Freddy replied, "I'm pretty sure, mother, that father is on the roof!"

Whercin the Monkey's Guests Do Harm—

NOT that the monkey was an ungracious host—no, indeed, he was anything but that. When the tortoise arrived at his house on the evening before, he had made the old fellow welcome, saying:

"Come in, Mr. Tortoise, and I shall make you as comfortable as I can."

And when the rabbit came wearily to a halt before it, the monkey's door, and begged the favor of a glass of water, the monkey straightway pulled him into the house and declared that he would lodge there for the rest of the night.

So, too, the kangaroo was forced to become the guest of the kind Mr. Monkey.

But it was for the very reason that the monkey indignantly refused to return his kindness in some fitting way. Had he not something to do with work of some sort—with which they might aid him?

No, said the monkey at first, and then he belittled himself that it was high time his wheat were sown. Did the tortoise, the rabbit and the kangaroo wish to help him? It would not take as very long.

Of course the three would help. And they straightway slung the bags of grain about their shoulders, and the field they went, sowing the grain industriously.

It had all the way, that by noon the task was finished. Thereupon the monkey invited them to dinner, after which he speeded them upon their way.

The monkey had almost forgotten about his three guests when the shoots of the young wheat began to appear above the ground. Out to his field trotted the monkey to examine its growth. But when there he started aghast. How did it happen that the wheat grew in such peculiar fashion?

Then the solution of the problem presented itself to him.

The tortoise, in sowing, made such slow progress that the grains were dropped very close together—so close that when they grew up they would make it difficult for the monkey to pass through the waving tops. And the rabbit ran so swiftly that the wheat was distributed over a vast tract of ground, only a grain or two appearing in any one place. While the kangaroo deposited a handful of wheat at each hop, so that the wheat grew up in widely separated clumps.

And the monkey found that the tortoise, the rabbit and the kangaroo had unintentionally made him the laughing stock of every one in the neighborhood. For and near to view this strange-looking field of grain, and poked at it with a stick of wood.

When Every Wish was Granted

"I do wish I could do everything I wanted!" Sarah sighed discontentedly when told that eating between meals wasn't good for little girls.

Sarah's mother smiled as she heard the whispered complaint. "And do you think you would be really happy if you had such liberty, Sarah?" she asked.

"Would I be happy? I guess I would!" was the emphatic reply.

"I've a good mind to try you," added the mother reflectively. Then she turned to her little daughter and said:

"Sarah, for one whole day you may do just as you please."

"EVERYTHING! Honest, mamma, can I do everything I want to?" cried Sarah.

Mamma nodded her head.

For a moment Sarah was too astonished to move. Visions of ice-cream sodas, candy galere and glorious escapades danced before her mind's eye.

Then she sprang out of door, anxious to lose just a moment of this day of riotous pleasure. Outside she met her cousin, Frances, to whom she imparted the wonderful news. Frances was scornfully doubtful until Sarah offered to show substantial proof by going to her "bank" and therefrom extracting a board of exactly 25 cents.

"All for candy and sodas!" screamed

No sooner was Joe's head released than away he sped, with Sarah tagging frantically at the reins. Down the street he flew, while behind toiled like, in fierce pursuit. Then, with a sudden swerve, the goat turned a corner. Over went the wagon and out pitched Sarah, head foremost. She was somewhat wiser when she rose to her feet and felt the bump just swelling upon her head. But, although a little sobered, she didn't mean to let this little accident spoil her day.

Over she went to where lived a couple of rough little boys, with whom she had been forbidden to play. They were going out to the park. They told her, and didn't she want to go along?

Sarah wasn't long in deciding whether or not she wished to go. Of course, she would, and she didn't need to ask mamma, either.

She didn't even pause for lunch.

Cunning Elfin Airships

Friendly Thingumbob

TED WAS CARRIED ON THE SHOULDERS OF HIS TEAMMATES

TED reclined at full length upon the hay. But although his body was at rest, his mind was not.

He said of his mind. Indeed, he glanced at the wrinkled brow would have told you that Ted was perturbed.

"I just can't do it. I know I can't! I don't pitch well enough to half to beat the Leroy team. And my arm's all bad!"

"It's exactly my luck to be in bad trim for the game. I'm most anxious to win," he concluded, kicking out his heels vengefully.

"I'll wager I could beat the Leroy team," said a voice almost at his ear. Ted looked around in astonishment, but could see no one. "And who are you?" he asked aloud.

"I'll tell you, I'm a Thingumbob—the nicest person in all the world!" replied the voice, as a tiny creature no bigger than Ted's thumb hopped upon his chest and grinned in a friendly fashion at him.

"Well, of all the little persons I ever met you are the smallest!" gasped Ted, carefully scrutinizing the elf.

The Thingumbob responded, with a smirk, "And I'll wager you're the smartest, too!"

The lad was now so interested that he raised himself on his elbow. This caused the Thingumbob to slide down into the hay, where he struggled desperately to free himself from the wisps until Ted reached him and placed him upon his hand.

"You want to be more careful!" scolded the little visitor, swelling with indignation and striving to catch his breath.

"It was all so funny that Ted found it hard to keep from laughing, but he tried to look penitent as he replied, 'I'll remember hereafter that you're not quite so big as I am.'"

This only served to make the Thingumbob more angry, for he spattered: "I may not be as tall as you, but I can pitch far better! Don't believe it, do you? Well, I'm going to prove it. Don't be surprised when you see me in your hand when you pitch in tomorrow's game. I can get from place to place in a marvelous manner. And I'm going to ride on the ball and guide it so that it will curve in a way you never saw before!"

With these words the Thingumbob disappeared. Ted tried to make himself believe it was all a dream, but he couldn't help thinking of the elf's words when he walked into the pitcher's box to pitch the first ball against the Leroy batsmen. Just as the ball was about to leave his hand he saw a tiny little creature behave himself.

"Then as the ball sped upon its way you should have seen it curve! It turned and twisted on its course in a way that completely bewildered the batsmen, while Bob Johnson, the catcher, was so surprised that he simply let the ball hit against his glove. This was only the beginning. Man after man came up to the plate, only to strike out.

At the close of the half of the inning, the team crowded around Ted. "You're a wonder, Ted!" cried Bob. "I've never seen such curves! How in the world did you manage to practice them?"

The Leroy team, such as well have given up right away. Every man who came to the plate struck out. None could solve this puzzling delivery. Meanwhile Ted pitched as in a dream. He knew it was all the work of the Thingumbob, and he was honest enough to realize that this wasn't playing ball in the right way. But he couldn't talk to the Thingumbob, because the umpire would think he was crazy. And if he told the other players they would also think him out of his mind, so he continued in the box, striking out every batsman who faced him.

How they cheered Ted when the game was over! Every one imagined that Ted took the mound in such a quiet way because he was so modest. They didn't know that all credit belonged to the Thingumbob, who had pitched for him.

And Ted didn't feel at all alone when he was carried from the field.

"IMPARTED THE NEWS TO FRANCES"

Sarah triumphantly.

Frances immediately became interested. And all her doubt was removed as she accepted the invitation to pay a visit to the nearest drug store, there to revel in ice-cream sodas.

Still playing the hostess, Sarah tripped to the confectionery, with Frances close in her wake. "Course, it was necessary to make the remaining ice-cream as far as possible. Taffies seemed to satisfy every requirement. When this extravagant purchase was completed Sarah came forth, with a 'sucker' bulging in each cheek and with the determination to conquer new worlds.

Opportunity was not long in coming. Near by stood the Jones "police patrol," to which was attached his vicious billy-goat, Joe. Now, Sarah had been cautioned never to Indeed, with a good supply of taffies still remaining, what did any girl want with other food?

Sarah went out to the park, but she didn't return in a hurry. The bad boys left her early in the afternoon, and she had to find her way back home alone. 'Twasn't long before the time she trudged up the steps leading to home. She had been crying part of the way, and it was a dirty, unhappy, tear-stained little face that was raised to mamma's face a few moments later. And it was a penitent, ill little girl who confessed to mother at bedtime that night.

"I know, after all, mamma, you know best what's good for me."

Sunday School Lesson

CONDUCTED BY REV. T. D. JONES

February 7th, 1909.

Correspondence is invited upon any lesson, or points of difficulty. Address to Sunday School, Pioneer Office, Didsbury.

Golden Text: Prov. 12, 22.—Lying lips are an abomination to Jehovah; but they that deal truly are his delight.

Lesson: Acts 4, 12 & 13, 11.

Verses 12-13 outline the principles of the first Christian commonwealth. Society then, as now, had its gaping wounds. Some people had riches in excess, whilst others were in direst need. Fearful evils arose out of this condition of society. From superabundant wealth arises selfishness, pride, arrogance, injustice, etc. From poverty arises envy, jealousy and ill will toward those who have large possessions. This was seen to be against the good of the whole community, hence the practice of communism in which the rich helped to bear the burden of the poor so that no one lacked. Wealth must be judged by its usefulness; it is either trust to be used or it is a peril to be escaped. We have the same problems today demanding the attention of the Church of Christ. Individual perfection is seen to depend upon a perfect society and a perfect society is impossible whilst flesh and blood are cheap, and whilst man are haunted by prospects, dread. Every man ought to be given the fullest opportunity to do the best work he can; to render his best service to humanity; all that he needs to develop and bring out his best ought to be given him. The early commonwealth of the Christian church sought to correct the evils of society by encouraging the practice of the broadest sympathies, by developing Christlikeness.

Do you think that the commonwealth of the Apollon is possible on national lines? What would have to be done before such a state could be possible? What do men propose today as a cure for social evils? Would Christian Socialism remove the evils arising from excessive riches and utter need? Can there be a perfect individual apart from a perfect society? (Note: Christian Socialism is a state in which many actions are dominated by love.)

Verses 1-11 tell of false deception and its fatal end. The sin of Ananias did not consist in the gift, but in the spirit in which it was given. He wanted to get religion, yet did not want to sacrifice much to get it. Thus he is the type of thousands today. They call them nominal Christians. They do not believe in suffering with Christ, though they expect to reign with him. They fell to see that what they are and have, must be given and used in the Master's service if they would be his followers.

What was the sin of Ananias? Was Sapphira as guilty as he? Would it be wise to estimate the value of a man's religion by its cost? How do you account for the sudden deaths of the two culprits? Does all selfishness end in death?

The result of this remarkable manifestation of power would be a cleansed community, and for a long time no one would seek to enter unless his sins were pure and his intentions good.

Coyote Bounties

When the Alberta Government took charge of the Province's destinies the Western Stock Growers Association were granting bounties on timber wolves for the protection of stock, and the amount expended by them yearly was reimbursed to them by the Territorial Government. During 1906 and 1907 this policy was continued by the local Government, until in 1908 it was discontinued the bounty appropriation of $50,000 was made for the entire province and made to include coyotes as well.

EARLIER REGULATIONS

The bounty paid by the Association was $15.00 for each adult wolf and $5.00 each for pups. In 1906 the total amount paid by the Government to the Association as bounties on these animals was $1,860.00.

In 1907 the Government paid $3,598.70 for timber-wolf and coyote bounties under its own regulations, and $1,030 through the Stock Growers Association, the total being $4,628.70, for timber-wolf or the following table indicates this more clearly:

Year	Amount expended in bounties
1905 (Paid by Territorial Govt.)	$1,665.00
1906 (Paid by Alberta Govt.)	$1,860.00
1907 (Paid by Alberta Govt.)	$4,628.70
1908 (Paid by Alberta Govt.)	$25,701.00

HAUNTS OF WOLVES

The following taken from the last annual report of the minister of Agriculture, contains much useful information in regard to trapping and hunting these animals.

As the depredations of timber wolves and coyotes cause a loss to the settlers of this province amounting to many thousands of dollars annually a few remarks as to the best and most successful manner of capturing or destroying them will no doubt prove of interest.

The hunter and trapper prefers of course to take the pelts of these animals between the first day of December and the first day of March while the fur is at its best. The price realized of pelts taken during this time runs from one to two dollars on coyotes and five to seven dollars for timber wolves. The bounty of one dollar on coyotes and ten dollars on timber-wolves. The addition to the value of the pelt as fur, will no doubt be an inducement for them to give the hunting of these animals more attention. Any person who knows the country adjacent to the place of residence may readily locate the dens of these animals by studying the lay of the country.

For breeding dens they choose, if possible, natural cavities or washed out hollows on the southern slopes of rocky or bad land ridges. These are usually a high point not far from the den where the male is on guard during the day. Good tracking snow often lies on the ground during the early part of the breeding season, which renders the finding of the dens much easier, even on bare ground there is little trouble in locating these dens.

By riding along ridges until the tracks are found the direction of the dens can often be located by the lay of the land. Near the den the tracks become more perceptible and often gather into well worn trails. Coyotes make their dens in the same kind of places as wolves, and also dig burrows or use old badger holes, slightly enlarged, and in order to reach them a shovel is often necessary. Farmers or ranchers should not allow wolf or coyote pups to grow up near or on their lands. A short time spent in trying to locate them will usually meet with success and it is up to every one to try to protect himself by destroying them. The young pups of wolves and coyotes are nearly black, but as they grow older the colour fades to dull yellow, and when about three months old a new light grey coat is acquired.

As a Family

THERE ARE NO OTHERS BETTER FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, AND KIDNEY DERANGEMENTS THAN

Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Lots of suffering would be avoided and much serious disease prevented if every family did as the writer of this letter suggests.

He has found out from experience with many remedies that there is nothing so good as Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a family medicine for biliousness and constipation. Mr. G. W. Parish, Sturgeon Bay, Ont., writes: "In the year 1867 I was very bad with my kidneys. I could not work on account of my back being lame, sore and painful all the time. Though I carefully followed the directions of our family doctor he was unable to do me much good. At this time Dr. Chase was becoming known as an especially successful physician and on the advice of my uncle, Charles Williams, I went to Dr. Chase at Arbor, Michigan, and he gave me a box of his pills for kidney disease. I took them and followed the directions which good they did me. They helped me so much that I went back to the doctor and bought a dozen more boxes. We always keep them in the house as a family medicine, and I would not think of using any other pills."

You should not be misled by the various attempts of imitators, as the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Recent Book author, are on every box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmonson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is a direct blood purifier, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the cause of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting in the general body work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one Hundred Dollars to any person that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

TO RESTORE "VICTORY."

Nelson's Flagship Will Be Again Refitted as She Was at Trafalgar.

After careful consideration, the British Admiralty have decided that Nelson's flagship, the Victory, almost the last relic of the great naval wars, is to be re-fitted, re-painted, and as nearly as possible restored to the condition in which she gloriously led the port column of the British fleet into battle at Trafalgar.

At present she is fitted with masts which belonged to the old rigged iron cruiser Shah. These will be removed, and masts like those which she carried under Nelson will be placed in the ship, with spars and rigging of the ancient pattern, which is to be copied as faithfully as possible down to the smallest detail.

The nettings along the side are to be cut down and the hull of the ship, thus restored to its old appearance, will be painted in alternate black and yellow bands, with vermilion on the gunports. At the bow the Victory is painted in alternate bands of black and white. The unsightly structures which for the last ten years have disfigured her upper deck are to be removed.

Sir John Fisher was commander-in-chief at Portsmouth he ordered the cockpit of the Victory, which was used as a storehouse for Nelson's death. Now the process is to be carried out through the whole ship, and will cost about £100,000. It is a historic interest. Unfortunately only a few of the guns which she actually fired at Trafalgar remain on board her, but every effort will be made to find the others and to put them back.

On Friday Day, last, the Victory was towed over there was an interesting feature. For the first time in recent years the ship's deck was painted. This was not the first reconstruction which the noble old Victory has undergone. Built in 1793, she was reconstructed in 1826, shortly after which she was hoisted her flag in her. The vermilion painting of the lids of the gunports and the interior of the ship is said to have been originally adopted to hide the traces of blood. It goes back to a very remote past in British naval history.

The modern masts in the Victory do not fit the ship, and are lower than the ancient ones, while the masts differs altogether from that which marked her in Nelson's time.

Bush Vendetta.

A young Kanaka, of about eighteen years, was recently brought from an adjoining island, but it was found necessary to send him away to another station. It appears that some years ago the tribe from which the boy was taken had murdered a man belonging to a bush tribe near the station. How the natives got the boy was there is a mystery, but, nevertheless, it became known. One day a native, who had not been on the mission station for a year, suddenly made his appearance. The boy was carefully watched, and it was ascertained that he had been sleeping in a room occupied by a missionary, but he became so terrified that he fled. He was then taken to the station where, Miss Young says that the authorities are doing all they can to get the boy out of the island, and while the boy is in New Guinea, and while there they buy rifles and ammunition. They are certainly not supplied by white traders, who are too much concerned about their own safety to supply the natives with weapons of destruction. It is alleged that some of the boys at the station are being taught to use the rifles and ammunition. It has happened that some of the boys when discharged had ammunition in their possession.

A Spectacular Skipper.

Dr. H. M. Moran, the captain of the Wallabies, the travelling Australian football team, soon to come to Canada, one would never have dreamed of a footballer, for, wearing spectacles as he always does, save when on the field, and being a very pale-faced, thin-looking individual, one at first glance puts him down as a bookworm who regularly burns the midnight oil. He also mourns a snake! He happened to be staying at a station in Australia, and while sitting in the veranda, he was startled by seeing the head of a huge snake thrust out through the creepers. Slowly the huge monster—there were some seven feet of him—uncoiled and advanced. Springing up, the dainty doctor seized a stick, fell upon the reptile, and slew it. On looking round, he found the ladies of the party moaning and weeping from their eyes, while in the middle distance stood his host, speechless with fury. Ultimately it was explained to the Wallaby captain that he had done to death a pet snake kept about the house for the express purpose of abolishing the rats which abounded on the premises!

The Queen's Favorites.

Queen Alexandra, probably the best respected and most universally loved monarch of the world, has, even, once upon a time made some most interesting confessions as to her personal preferences. Her favorite king, for instance—Edward VII., of course, excluded—is Richard Coeur de Lion, her queen, Duenna, and her mark; her poet, Shakespeare; her painter, Rubens; her writer, Dickens; her favorite music, she prefers sky-blue, and of all flowers, as a not unnatural consequence, the forget-me-not. Her favorite name is, of course, Edward; her favorite dish, Yorkshire pudding; her favorite spot, England.

NOT FOR MONEY

WOULD HE BE WITHOUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They Cured His Lumbago of Twenty Years' Standing, and Made Him Feel Twenty Years Younger.

Fortune Harbor, Nfld. (Special).—Sixty years of age, but hale and hearty and with all the vigor of a young man, Mr. Richard Quirk, well known and highly respected here, gives all the credit for his good health to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I suffered for over twenty years from Lumbago and Kidney Disease," Mr. Quirk says, "and after consulting doctors and taking their medicines, made up my mind I was incurable. I was unable to work when I was persuaded to buy a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. To my great and lasting surprise I had not taken half a box when I experienced great relief. Seven boxes cured me. That was in 1904 and I am still cured. I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills for any money. I am twenty years younger than before I took them."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Healthy Kidneys train all the impurities out of the blood. That's why they cure Rheumatism, Scatosis, and other diseases caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood.

TRIBAL CUSTOMS.

Missionary Has Made Interesting Discoveries Regarding Papuans.

A Methodist missionary in British New Guinea—now known as Papua—Rev. W. E. Brownlow, has added to the world's knowledge of the curious and little known races of the great North Pacific island by the discovery and partial taming of a new tribe. The race in question consists of about 2000 people, living at a place called Dobu. The customs of the race are most curious. The immigration policy is more drastic than that of "White Australia" for all strangers have either to become full members of the tribe or to be killed. When dealing with Mr. Brownlow, however, the difficulty was not over by making him a father of the tribe.

Women have great influence in the affairs of the tribe, and their duties are quite distinct from those of the men. The men clear the bush and dig the ground, then the women prepare it and plant the crops, the crop being theirs. If a man wanted any came he had to ask for them. The women had no property of their own. Wives were obtained by purchase. If a man paid his wife for his wife he could leave her occasionally, but she could leave him if he did not like it, and go back to her own people, where she still had a home.

In the religion of the people, continued Mr. Brownlow, there was some notion of a God. A deceased relative was regarded as a sacred, and his name must not be mentioned. A distinction from those of the people was made in the case of anyone being ill, and given up by the natives. The natives might then call upon the name of the ancestor, invoking him to bring back the spirit of the deceased. Their heaven was a place where the healthy, strong and good-looking went. All the others were left to rot. They believe in a place where they created them, but left them alone afterward.

FROM FACTORY TO PULPIT.

British Passive-Resister Is Still a Youngster at Seventy-Two.

Dr. John Clifford, who recently celebrated his seventy-second birthday, and his jubilee as a Baptist minister in England, worked as a boy in a soap factory. In spite of this he studied at night in order to educate himself for the ministry—for he had not reached his thirtieth he had made up his mind to be a preacher. There are few more popular preachers in England than those who have fought over Mr. Balfour's Education Bill by Passive Resistance methods have made his sterling sense, energy and courage. One anecdote may be told about the Passive-Resistance movement which reveals the character of the man, who was then in his seventeenth year. He received at 2 a.m. a letter from his mother, telling him that first Passive-Resistance case to be held at a small Dorchester village. At 4 a.m. he started for the station for the newspaper train, and after a drive of seven miles across the Dorchester hills, reached the place of sale in time to address his co-resistors.

In spite of his age, Dr. Clifford still has the vigor and is often the object of boisterous fun. He leaps rates and jumps hedges with the youngest, and sports with the most sprightly and with his witty remarks. On one occasion he and his "boys" as he calls his resisters, were having a summer outing and traveled in a compartment labelled "Enceased." There were two or three, however, and a young lady, not of the institute party, anxiously seeking a seat, asked if she might enter. "By all means," replied the doctor, with a twinkle in his eye, "if you don't mind being enceased."

"As Dead as Queen Anne."

Mr. P. F. W. Ryan, the author of "Queen Anne and Her Court," just published, offers a curious and plausible explanation of the old saying, "Dead as Queen Anne." During the closing years of the reign of Anne Her Majesty lived much in retirement at Windsor, while her brother, the Pretender, resided in Lorraine, awaiting an opportunity to strike a blow for the possession of his sister's throne. The Queen's health was pre-occupied with much in connection with the death of the Queen the Pretender would appear in the capital at the head of an army.

Constant rumors of this kind, which were as constantly shown to be lies, had the effect in the end of creating a scepticism concerning all news as to the Queen's health. When the end came, the people were naturally incredulous, and only the official proclamation some hours after her death convinced them that the Queen was really dead. On that subject no further lies could be told to harm honest credulous. Her death the saying "Dead as Queen Anne" came to be the most emphatic possible way of asserting that somebody or something was gone beyond all hope of life or resurrection.

Selling Him Right. The poet was busy at his desk. "The dre of quins is burning, eh?" queried the casual caller.

"Not so you can notice it," replied the rhymer. "That's my cigar you smell."
